Every one admitted into the Freshman Class must be acquainted with English Grammar, Arithmetic, and Geography, and must stand examination in the Latin and Greek Grammar, Cæsar's Commentaries, Sallust and Virgil, and Jacob's Greek Reader, and no one is admitted into a higher Class who is inferior to a majority of the Class he proposes to enter. No person shall be admitted into the College from any other School, without producing a certificate from the authorities of such School, that he has left it without censure.

A meeting of the Faculty shall be held on the fourth Saturday from the commencement of every session, for the purpose of ascertaining, whether every student shall have paid the Treasurer's bill for that session, and every student who has not done so, shall be considered as suspended from the recitations of the College until the tuition fee is paid.

Each Class has at least two recitations a-day in the Books here mentioned, besides occasional lectures from the different Professors on various subjects connected with them. The French and German languages are taught, the latter of which receives particular attention. The following works are read: Follen's German Reader; Zschokke's Geschichte der Schweitz; Getzinger's Deutsche Grammatic. The students are exercised in conversing in the German, and in writing compositions in that tongue. Specimens of English composition are exhibited once a fortnight, by each member of the different Classes, and much attention is paid to the rhetorical and logical analysis of the English language. Porter's Analysis of Rhetorical Delivery and Whateley's Rhetoric will be studied. As soon as the Professorship of Natural Sciences will be filled, Mineralogy and Geology will form a part of the course.

A Report on the Course of Instruction in Marshall College, giving a full view of the plan of Education adopted, its end and method, is in preparation and will be sent to Parents, and the friends of Literature in general, as soon as printed.

Public examinations, continuing several days, are held at the close of each Session, and at the termination of the whole course.

Candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts must go through the whole course of studies, but persons are admitted into the College as irregular students, who may attend the recitations of any of the Classes they are prepared for.

PUBLIC WORSHIP.

The students are required to attend Prayers in the College Chapel every morning and evening, and public worship in the Chapel on Sunday, excepting those whose Parents desire them to attend other churches in town.

EXPENSES.

The regular charges are,

For the Winter Session:

	D.	C.
Tuition, - - - -	18	00
Room-rent, - - - -	3	50
Contingent expenses, - -	1	50

Beyond the regular charges of the College, the expenses of students will depend much upon their own economy and the indulgence of Parents. The morals of the youth, and consequently, too, the interests of the Institution, must be unfavorably influenced by extravagant expenditures, and it is earnestly recommended to Parents, to make the allowance of pocket money as small as possible.

All the students are expected to reside in the College, unless they are excused for special reasons, or unless the rooms in College are not sufficient to accommodate all. The greatest care is taken to guard their morals, and its friends may be assured that no pains shall be spared to keep the Institution pure in this respect. The rooms of the students will be frequently visited by the officers of the College, and care shall be taken that none leaves the College Building at unseasonable hours. All students, who room in the College, will be required to eat in commons in the Refectory.

LAW SCHOOL.

The students in this department are required to study the best elementary writers, having reference, when necessary to a full knowledge of the subject, to the original authorities. Recitations and examinations take place five times a week, except when Judge Thomson is occupied in Court, or absent on the Circuit. On these occasions, what the student may have passed over negligently, is recalled and impressed on his memory; what he has not understood, is fully explained; differences between the Common Law of England and the Laws of this country, are pointed out, and instructions are communicated in a plain and familiar manner, on matters connected with the subject of the recitation. Every student is required to furnish, once a week, either an abridgment in writing of a chapter in the elementary work he is studying, or a written opinion on some case stated, or question of Law.

A Moot Court is about to be established in the School, in which the process and pleading, in fictitious causes, will be prepared by the students, and demurrers, cases stated, &c. will be argued and determined, in a manner as nearly resembling as possible, the actual proceedings of a Court of Justice. In the discussions in this Court, while the young gentlemen will be required to look diligently into the authorities, every possible pains will be taken to induce them to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the great elementary principles of the science, which may be involved in the question.

The course of studies embrace not only the principles, but the practice of the profession—every thing necessary to a full preparation for admission to the bar. The period of studies is regulated by the rules of Court. When the student is under the age of twenty-one, he is required to study three years; if above that age, two years.

Upon a final and satisfactory examination, the degree of Bachelor of Laws will be conferred by the Faculty.

As the Law School has been recently established, the whole of the books, to make up the complete course of study, have not yet been selected. The following will be among the number:

Blackstone's Commentaries; Selwyn's Nisi Prius; Kent's Commentaries; Chitty, on Pleading; Philips or Starkey, on Evidence; Fonblanque, on Equity; Sugdon, on Vendors; Angel and Ames, on Corporations; Powell, on Contracts; Comyn, on Contracts; Pennsylvania Practice; Chitty, on Bills; Paley, on Agency; Story, on Bailments; Blanshard, on the Statute of Limitations; Toller's Law of Executors; Law of Principal and Surity, by Thobald; Platt, on Covenants; Cary, on Partnerships.

Where sufficient time is not allowed, some of the foregoing works must be omitted—and the course will, in some measure, be varied according to the State where the student purposes to practice.

The terms of instruction are $75 per annum, paid in half yearly payments, embracing all charges. The use of Judge Thomson's Law Library, Text books, Stationary, Library rooms, and fuel, are furnished to the students without additional charge.

Membership in the Moot Court, to gentlemen who do not belong to the Law School, will be $15 per annum.

The Law School is distinct from College regulations, and is kept at Chambersburg.
